Who should use a curling iron?

Who It's Good For: This curling iron is great for two cohorts of people: Those who can't maneuver a traditional curling iron and those with thick, coarse hair. While it works for all hair types, the fact that it does reach higher temperatures means that it will be able to style—and hold—coarser hair.

Do you need a curling iron or a wand?

Whether you're after beachy waves, a spiral, or just looking to add some definition after you air-dry your hair, there is a barrel, a heat range, and a technique that will get the job done. Curling irons, wands, and wavers work with every hair type under the sun and you really only need one solid option (okay, maybe two) in your arsenal.

What is a ceramic curling iron?

This helps reduce frizz and static, resulting in shinier, smoother curls and is particularly effective for thick or coarse hair," explains Cavalcante. "Ceramic curling irons feature ceramic plates or barrels that provide even heat distribution, minimizing damage and creating consistent curls.

What is a viris curling iron?

CURLS HAIR. TURNS HEADS. The new VARIS CURLING IRON SYSTEM is a highly efficient professional curling tool. The new 4-in-1 system features irons in different shapes and sizes, offering maximum flexibility for all styling needs. VARIS Hydroionic Crystals are infused into the curling iron barrels to further hydrate and condition the hair.

How does a curling iron work?

This particular curling iron uses something called ultra-zone technology, which essentially means that the iron monitors its heat output 250 times per second (!!) to ensure the temperature is even and optimized across every strand of hair. The result?

Smooth, silky hair that has an added reflective quality.

What is a tourmaline curling iron?

A tourmaline curling iron is a styling tool designed with tourmaline-infused ceramic plates. “Tourmaline, a semi-precious gemstone known for its unique properties, produces negative ions and infrared heat when incorporated into hair tools. This feature contributes to smoother, shinier, and less frizzy hair,” he says.
