Magnetars: Properties, Origin

and Evolution , Space Science Reviews

Magnetars are neutron stars in which a strong magnetic field is the main energy source. About two dozens of magnetars, plus several candidates, are currently known in our Galaxy and in the Magellanic Clouds. They appear as highly variable X-ray sources and, in some cases, also as radio and/or optical pulsars. Their spin periods (2-12 s) and spin-down rates ...

Artist's conception of a powerful magnetar in a star cluster. A magnetar is a type of neutron star with an extremely powerful magnetic field ( $\sim 10^9$  to  $10^{11}$  T,  $\sim 10^{13}$  to  $10^{15}$  G). [1] The magnetic-field decay powers the emission of high-energy electromagnetic radiation, particularly X-rays and gamma rays.[2]The existence of magnetars was proposed in 1992 by Robert Duncan ...

High-energy emission from a magnetar giant flare in the Magnetars are the most highly magnetized neutron stars in the cosmos (with magnetic field 10<sup>13</sup>-10<sup>15</sup> G). Giant flares from magnetars are rare, short-duration (about 0.1 s) bursts of hard X-rays

Fast Radio Bursts and Their High-energy Counterparts from Magnetar ...

The high-energy emission from a magnetar has been suggested to be due to magnetospheric activities (e.g., Thompson & Duncan 1995, 2001; Beloborodov & Thompson 2007). When a magnetar magnetosphere is triggered by crustal deformation, the magnetic energy in the crust will be released and converted to particle energy and radiation.

MAGNETIC ENERGY BUILDUP FOR RELATIVISTIC MAGNETAR

The magnetar outbursts, such as giant flares, occur with huge release of magnetic energy  $\sim 10^{44}$  -  $10^{46}$  erg. The energy for magnetar outbursts is widely accepted to be supplied by the star's magnetic field. However the physical process by which the energy is stored and released is one of the great puzzles in high-energy astrophysics.
