Overview

Former Apple and Sony designer, Ross Lovegrove, modeled this sculpture. He created it for the Museum for Angewandte Kunst (MAK) in Vienna. The solar tree provided street lighting powered entirely by the sun. The project aimed at incorporating design, nature, and art. Lovegrove designed the bright green stalks to bring.

This installation can be found just outside El Paso airport in Texas. It consists of an array of 16 15-ft vertical wind turbines. Each is lit from below with.

New World Wind has designed and developed “wind trees” for use by communities and businesses. Each tree consists of branches.

Elena Parouchevais is popularly known for her wind sculptures. Ondine is one of her well-recognized works. Elena created this sculpture in 2004 using copper and soldering. The sculpture took the form of a woman with what seems.

Sandy Grove is at the forefront of using and promoting solar energy. Not only does it generate its own electricity from roof-top solar cells, but it also generates 30% more than it needs. Sandy Grove installed the Spotlight solar structure.
